FUND MANAGER COMMENT

November was a positive month for INVL Emerging Europe Bond subfund which performed in line with the benchmark, both returning 0.6%. Moreover, the fund does have a superior year to date return compared to the wider market (9.0% vs 6.8% respectively).

After spiking by around 0.5% in October, 10-year US government yields remained largely unchanged in November, as investors awaited for more tangible signs of policy shifts from the newly elected US president. In Euro area, with inflation hovering around the European Central Bank's target of 2 percent, risk-free rates continued to turn downwards. In Central Eastern Europe the most significant news came from Romania, where a relatively unknown far-right candidate Calin Georgescu amassed the largest number of voters (~23%) in the first round of presidential elections. While the result was very surprising (early polls estimated for Georgescu not to proceed to the 2nd round of elections), the current expectation is for pro-EU population to unite against Georgescu (in the first round votes were very split between several pro-EU candidates) and vote in favour of a pro-Western liberal candidate Elena Lasconi. In December, Romania's Constitutional Court ordered a re-run of first round due to suspected third party interference.

During the month the fund added one new position to its portfolio – bonds of Romanian CEC Bank. The company is owned by the Romanian government, has strong capitalisation level and conservative leverage metrics, while it issued the bond at an attractive 5.625% yield to maturity. Moreover, we switched to newly issued bonds of Moldavian Trans-Oil. The old notes were tendered at 100.5 price, while the new issue was priced at 11.5% yield, thus solving the company's refinancing needs while offering an attractive yield to investors. Profit was also taken in senior preferred bonds of Luminor (2027 and 2028 issues) as the yield for the issues fell significantly below 4%. Overall, the fund maintains lower interest rate sensitivity than the benchmark (3.4 and 4.0 duration respectively) while having higher yield to maturity (4.6% vs 4.3% respectively).

*Standard deviation is used to measure risk. Standard deviation is an indicator that measures how strongly fund's daily return deviates from its mean. The lower the standard deviation the lower the fund's risk. The standard deviation value corresponds to the period shown in the historical returns graph.

Sharpe ratio measures the performance of an investment compared to a risk-free asset, after adjusting for its risk. The greater a portfolio's Sharpe ratio, the better its risk-adjusted performance. Sharpe ratio value corresponds to the period shown in the historical returns graph.
